The Province Keeps Control.

There will be general approval of the decision of the Government to retain the provincial telephone system and continue to operate it as a public enterprise. The system has made money, but was not established with that in view, and probably never will do better than maintain itself.

A previous Government bought out the Bell interests and created the provincial system in the belief that telephone service could thus be extended to sparsely settled parts of the country into which a private company would not build lines. That has been abundantly justified. There is no question that settlers in remote districts have telephone service, and have long had it, who could not have it if the system were company-owned.

It is possible, though doubtfully probable, that telephone service in the country, and in well settled parts of the country if supplied by a private corporation. For the reason that these are the only places in which the service might be obtained at a reasonable price. But lines where they cannot pay, and the less has to be made up by higher rates all around. There was some protest on that score where the rates were recently increased, but the Government has no general desire that this extension policy be abandoned, or that the system be turned over to a company.

Grading Regulations.

Grande Prairie farmers have raised a protest against the grade that is being given to their grain and a request is being made that the grain board be held in the northern district to hear complaints and investigate the matter. That is not by any means the only point at which there has been dissatisfaction expressed on the same score, though the protests have been numerous thus far. They have, however, been quite content to show that there is a very general feeling among farmers that something is wrong with the grading system. And in private conversation farmers declare, almost without exception, that such is the case.

The complaint seems to be not so much against the judgment of the graders or their agents as against the system of grading they work. That wheat containing fifteen per cent of moisture may be classed as "tough" is the rule against which there seems to be general complaint. It is claimed that what ought to be the equal of wheat formerly graded No. 1 or 2 is now graded "tough" on that account alone. Whatever the ground for this prevalent dissatisfaction, the fact that it exists creates a situation which will have to be dealt with, and the sooner the better. The grain commission would be well advised to make an inquiry into the whole subject, if that is necessary to acquit the board with the actual working of the system; and to either amend the regulations or to have the board they wish to be changed. Nothing but trouble is to be gained by allowing matters to drift.

The Reorganization at Vancouver.

Looked at from a distance, the shake-up in the Vancouver harbor board is something which might have happened sooner without being prejudicial. That is, if the shake-up in the harbor board is the way to get motion in what is conventionally called the westward "movement" of grain.

Whatever reason, the shipment of grain out of Vancouver has dwindled as the facilities for handling grain there have expanded. Elevator capacity has been multiplied within the last three years, but the more elevators were built the less wheat seemed to be able to get through them. It is claimed by Vancouver papers that, for years, there has been a surplus of grain in the harbor during the past fall that was loaded in the corresponding period of 1923 at the one elevator then in existence.

The explanation was offered that tramp steamers were so busy hauling United States grain to England that they could not be coaxed around to Vancouver for wheat cargoes. The theory looked weak in spite of the fact that the harbor did not make any records in handling wheat last year. For another, the British coal mine strike ended several weeks ago, but there has been no reported cessation of vessel arrivals at Vancouver elevators. And while Vancouver was explaining that it could not get ships, Seattle and Portland were getting ships by the load, and at times as much when they did a year ago.

The Vancouver grain route has this season been mainly a myth, and a disappointment to the Alberta grower. He has to mark the year which graded low because of weather conditions, and to accept the price of low grade grain. If there was ever a season when it needed the Vancouver relief, that season is over. The grain of low grade grain has been further depressed by the extra cost of shipping it to have and take to the Atlantic ports.

That the harbor board is held to have been responsible for this blockade at Vancouver suggests the claim that Alberta should have a representative on that body. If the commission holds such vast powers that it can act as a veto on the play that outlet near neighboring United States ports are humiliated with an export trade in wheat, then the province which depends upon that outlet for its main crop is in a worse case as to how these powers are to be checked.

The Worrier

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Take yesterday's worries and sort them all out
And you'll wonder whatever you worried about.
Look back at the curls which once furrowed your brow.
I fancy you'll smile at the most of them now.
They seem to be gone, but they really were not.
For one out of the woods all the years are forgot.

Look over the list of the blunders you've made.
The dove which you shot and the cat which you laid.
They frightened you once, and you thought at the time
That you'd never see them again, but they're still in the line.
But you did and you're living and still come strong
In spite of the trouble which happened along.

You can laugh at the journey which you have started.
You can smile at the dangers which you have survived.
What matter the doubts which have fretted your soul,
For the distance you've traveled, once you're at the goal?

So just keep on going, through thick and through thin,
Once you're out of the woods you will look back and Smile.

But you're the worrier! You're for the man
Who when he's in trouble does all that he can.
You're for the fellow who puts up a fight
To straighten things out and to make them right.

And I say for the comfort which makes men glad,
Tomorrow he'll smile at the trouble he had.

But you're the worrier! You're for the man
Who when he's in trouble does all that he can.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Chief Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

KEEP YOUR ABDOMEN FLAT

If you walked on all fours, the abdominal organs would hang in their natural position from the sides. Just imagine how they have learned to walk erect, these organs sag down, and lay out flat in the lower abdominal cavity. The stomach and intestines hang upon the lower organs of the pelvis. As the organs sag out of position down to the very basin of the pelvis. The consequence is that many faulty positions of these organs are developed.

One of the commonest troubles from prolapse of the abdominal organs is that caused by kinks in the colon. These may occur in the large colon or in the small intestine, and are either due to a prolapse of these organs, or to adhesions which pull some part of the intestines out of its normal position. Adhesions are composed of connective tissue, which grow from the irritated covering of one organ to another irritation on an adjacent organ.

Obtipation is so often the cause of constipation and simply means stagnation of the intestines. Without proper support and inflation of these organs, such stagnation could not exist, but the fact that it does exist, shows that prolapse is very common.

Weakness of the abdominal muscles can be used as the principle cause of any gastro-intestinal trouble. The muscles can be used as the principle cause of any gastro-intestinal trouble. The muscles can be used as the principle cause of any gastro-intestinal trouble.

There is no way you can rest these organs to their normal form and bring them back to their proper position, except by taking vigorous exercise for them.
